JOANN RYAN

The Chamber's Recipe for Spring

Spring has spring for the moment at least! It is energizing to see the sunshine and feel the warmer weather. What is especially gratifying is to greet people in person as we gradually schedule our meetings and events in person. It got me thinking of recipes and specifically, the Chamber's recipe for spring and success. It's easy because we have the right ingredients and we know what we want to achieve. Here goes:

Start with a pinch of dedication and belief in our mission to promote economic growth while enhancing the quality of life in NW CT.

Add a cup of the best staff, Board, Corporate and Premier Partners, members, volunteers and collaborators...special family and friends too.

Throw in a dash of spirit and energy created after once again attending Business After Hours.

Add a slice of Chamber Seminar Series, Executive Dialogues and Computer classes.

Include a tablespoon of SCORE and NCCC's Entrepreneurial Center.

Remember to add a teaspoon of LEADS, Membership Services and Government Relations.

You might even want to throw in the thoughts and ideas of the Manufacturer's Coalition, Health Care Council and Small Business Advisory.

Now...what to do with these delectable ingredients...

Grind away at the many challenges our small business people, service industry, educators, manufacturers, retailers, health care providers, financial institutions and non-profits face on a daily basis.

Mix up the business leaders, the legislative delegation, public officials and all of the representatives from the public and private sector and get them all working together to find solutions for the challenges.

Blend a generous mix of representatives who will be searching for potential new employees on Tuesday at the Job Fair from 10am to 2pm at Torrington's City Hall Auditorium.

Stir the pot diplomatically to smooth out any bumps and lumps we encounter on a daily basis.

Broil the negative.

Whisk away the problems.

Slice and dice the issues that seem insurmountable.

Sprinkle with the outstanding participants in Leadership NW.

Chop away at those little annoyances that sometimes occur.

Beat strenuously until the ingredients are smooth.

Share with all because it is in working together that we'll pass the taste test.

Governor's Torrington Visit

Governor Ned Lamont met with a group of business leaders and legislators at KidsPlay Children's Museum on March 8th for a round-table discussion about economic development. The main topic was the state of the old Yankee Pedlar Building which was gutted and left standing by current owners, Jayson Hospitality, and has become a fire hazard. Torrington Mayor Elinor Carbone said that the city is suing the owner for fees and other costs but it's tied up in court. Rufus de Rham [Warner Theatre] and Rachel Kelly [Kelly's Crystals] stressed the need for a hotel in the downtown area. Christina Emery [Prime Time House] voiced the growing mental health crisis. Other topics included lack of affordable internet, lack of public transportation, high gas prices, and a skilled worker shortage; Rep. Michelle Cook stated how these are all tied together. This visit followed a luncheon at Vinny's Restaurant & Pizzeria, to see plans for a new banquet hall using Brownfield Remediation State Funding, and included a tour of the KidsPlay museum with their expansion plans as well. Eileen Marriott, KidsPlay Museum Director, looks at Governor Lamont as he speaks (photo left).

Legislative Reception

Five Points Gallery Update

In just 10 years, Five Points Gallery has become one of Connecticut's most respected arts venues and a cornerstone of Torrington's revitalization as a cultural destination. The gallery guest book documents visitors from nearly every town in Connecticut, 29 states and 10 countries.

Although the new Five Points Arts Center on University Drive has generated much excitement in our region and beyond, we want to make it perfectly clear that...

FIVE POINTS GALLERY STAYS IN DOWNTOWN TORRINGTON!

The gallery continued operations throughout the pandemic; however, Five Points did not solicit exhibition sponsorships the past two years due to smaller opening receptions and virtual programming. As we return to larger artist receptions and in-person artist talks, we welcome individuals and businesses who might be interested in sponsoring an exhibit.

A Five Points Gallery $500 sponsorship provides the following benefits:

- The company or individual's name on the gallery's reception wall
- An opportunity for a brief speech at the exhibit's opening reception
- A time slot where a sponsor could host a private docent tour and reception in the gallery
- The company's logo and / or individual's name featured on the gallery's website
- The company's or individual's name featured in the Five Points newsletter and social media posts for the duration of the exhibit

Training Within Industry Builds a Qualified Workforce

Training Within Industry, commonly referred to as TWI, originated in the United States in the 1940s during World War II. According to the TWI Institute, a national network of industry professionals was drafted to develop techniques to quickly train unskilled workers entering the war production workforce as many skilled laborers went off to war.

TWI was introduced in Japan after the war for rebuilding purposes and is still in widespread use there today, most notably as part of Toyota's Production System. It has helped drive success for Toyota in continuous improvement, standard work and in its ability to sustain those improvements.

While its use in the U.S faded over time, TWI has seen a resurgence in recent years as industries such as healthcare, construction and manufacturing are reaping its benefits.

Simply put, this proven tool applies to anyone who teaches anybody to do anything. It's ideally suited for supervisors, team leaders, and those indirectly managing others. A superior training methodology, particularly in a mass-production setting, TWI helps to facilitate greater speed to market and remove waste associated with training time. Once it's taught, it helps sustain high performance and excellence in quality.

For manufacturing companies concerned about retiring employees taking their production and operational knowledge with them, TWI can help capture that experienced know-how and transfer it to the remaining workforce.

TWI teaches workers more than just what to do to complete a specific task, it reinforces how to do a job and gets them to understand why the job must be done that way.

TWI-JI

One of the first courses of Training Within Industry is Job Instruction (JI). The purpose of TWI JI is to get workers fully trained and adding value to the organization in the shortest period of time possible while preventing problems that could arise from faulty instruction. JI establishes a single best method for doing a job and allows a trainer to transfer knowledge to a learner quickly while also verifying comprehension.

TWI-JR

Another TWI program is Job Relations (JR) training. JR training involves teaching supervisors how to handle problems, how to prevent them from occurring, and it helps develop a logical approach to tackling issues with a people-centric view. The core elements of JR teach the basics of consensus-building and individual problem-solving leading to positive employee relations.

TWI-JS/JM

TWI also offers Job Safety (JS) which enables supervisors to decrease employee injuries and potential causes; and Job Methods (JM) which assists employees in recognizing the waste inherent in current methods and how to reduce those wastes utilizing existing resources.

TWI is an improvement process with a set of standardized programs that addresses the essential skills needed by anyone who leads the work of others. It can help transfer valuable knowledge of seasoned workers to younger and newer employees in an organization. And it can ensure that a job is done correctly and consistently over time.
